Aiden: I like books.

Speech Therapist: I know. You do like books. Well this is a book that was written by a little girl named Samantha and she gave this to her teacher. I have a hearing aid. I wear it in my left ear, is what she said. It helps me hear better, because it makes the sounds louder. I use an FM unit with my hearing aid in school. This is the receiver. I call it a boot. This is her FM receiver. And who's is this?

Aiden: Mine!

Speech Therapist: Yeah! That's yours! The teacher wears the transmitter. This can help you talk to your new teacher about it, because she is not going to know what a transmitter is.

Aiden: Yeah but I might forget.

Speech Therapist: Well, that's why we're going to create a book. This transmitter has different buttons. Look at those different buttons! Yours has different buttons too! Look at that!

Aiden: Oh gee!

Speech Therapist: Oh geez! When I go to a different class I tell the teacher I have an FM unit that they should use. So she carries it around. If they don't know how to use it I tell them what to do. How does she know what tell them what to do?

Aiden: Because she wrote this book.

Speech Therapist: Because she wrote this book! And she has this book with her! Now we can actually change this to be a C.I. And an FM unit. And you can teach your teachers how to use it.
